

Creating a Hierarchy:

A Series of Green Spaces

Lindley Harmon

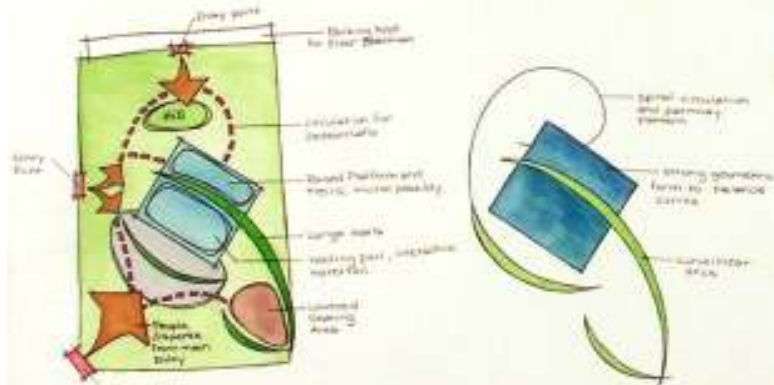

Lindley Harman

Plan Diagram

This design consists of a main gathering area known as the Quad, a dispersion of lines of terracing, courtyards in which grass will be the main focus, and two each of these terraces will lead to a pocket park or major pocket park in which the citizens of Richmond will terminate and enjoy their time. The project team focuses mainly on the pocket park part of the project. Each pocket park will utilize some of the design aspects of the Quad and the terraces, ensuring everything flows. This particular design is isolated from the rest of the site in order to be self-sufficient, with its own parking lot, a covered seating area, and a water fountain just by access for all citizens to be able to relax and enjoy the park. This overall design that many attach to is not only visually pleasing but also designed to transform into a greener, sustainable history and more knowledge parks in the future.

Diagrams

Sections

Site Plan

